CONNECTED

Imagine an old Oak tree with its branches stretching outward, full of life and vitality. The branches thrive as long as they remain connected to the tree, drawing nourishment and strength from the roots. But, if a single branch is cut off, it withers and dies, unable to sustain itself apart from the source of nourishment.

In Acts 2:42, we see the early Christians embodying this principle: "They devoted themselves to the apostles' teaching and to fellowship, to the breaking of bread and to prayer." Their responsibility was clear—remain connected, both to God and to one another. The early Christians devoted themselves to learning, growing in faith through the apostles' teachings, not according to their thoughts and insights, but to the guidance of the Holy Spirit. This allowed them to forge bonds through genuine fellowship that comes through the Word of God. They shared meals, lives, and were devoted in prayer, creating a vibrant, thriving community rooted in Christ.

Our responsibility should mirror theirs. We are called to be active participants in our faith, not isolated branches that will wither. We should engage deeply with Scripture, connect regularly with fellow Christians, and cultivate a life of prayer. The nourishment and strength of our faith will flourish when we remain connected to the true vine: Christ.
